

Family Literacy Program Volunteer Kensington Neighbourhood House

Overview

The Kensington Neighbourhood House offers a range of recreational, social, educational and vocational classes as well as morning childcare. The programs cater primarily for disadvantaged people, families and older adults. The House's programs operate according to the principles of community development including empowerment and support to become self-determining, working to establish a just society and building a harmonious community which respects diverse backgrounds.

The Kensington Neighbourhood House is registered as a Community Provider of Education with Adult Community and Further Education.

The Family Literacy Program is an after school pilot program to assist children in grades prep to grade 4 from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds (CALD) with their reading and literacy skills. Parents participate in the program alongside their child to improve their own literacy skills as well as gain strategies that they can use at home to support their children with their reading.
